Thursday morning

Dear Mary

It does seem funny to write to you--it is a wonder that I didn't forget for it seems as if you must be here. I hope that you got home all right with the Daphies. Mary Garrett came down just after you had gone with her mind intent upon taking you down to the station, and she wished me to tell you how sorry she was not to see you again though you had said good bye. She is inclining toward Mrs. Wilson but there is another very nice person whom she is to see again. Mrs. Wilson wants to go very much, I fancy, from what I can hear. At any rate Mary feels that it was a great thing to come on, and seems so cheerful this morning. A. F. had a little 'somewhat of a cold' and was hoarse last night but I gave her some ammonia and she thinks that the cold is all gone this morning, but she is staying in bed awhile. I do hope that she is all right and as she insists but I can tell better when she gets up. ---The meeting yesterday was very prosperous and all went well it took from four to six--and now I shall be done with that, for a while at any rate. We had a good quiet evening but we missed you, and we were all from one reason and another glad to go to bed early. Thank Becca for her letter. She was very kind to write yesterday. With much love

Sarah
